Paper Information:

Title: Front Matter and Editors' Preface
Author(s): Martin Carruthers, Carol van Driel Murray, Andrew Gardner, Jason Lucas, Louise Revell, and Ellen Swift
Pages: i–iv

DOI: http://doi.org/10.16995/TRAC2001_i_iv
Publication Date: 05 April 2002

Volume Information:

Copyright and Hardcopy Editions:

The following paper was originally published in print format by Oxbow Books for TRAC. Hard copy editions of this volume may still be available, and can be purchased direct from Oxbow at http://www.oxbowbooks.com.

TRAC has now made this paper available as Open Access through an agreement with the publisher. Copyright remains with TRAC and the individual author(s), and all use or quotation of this paper and/or its contents must be acknowledged. This paper was released in digital Open Access format in April 2013.
TRAC 2001

Proceedings of the Eleventh Annual THEORETICAL ROMAN ARCHAEOLOGY CONFERENCE which took place at

The University of Glasgow
29–31 March 2001

edited by
Martin Carruthers, Carol van Driel-Murray, Andrew Gardner, Jason Lucas, Louise Revell and Ellen Swift

Oxbow Books
Contents

Preface ....................................................................................................................................... iv

Considering Continuity of Deposition on Votive Sites in Northeastern France from 200 BC to AD 100 by Imogen Wellington ................................................................. 1

Pots for Cash? A critique of the role of the ‘free market’ in the Late Roman economy by James Gerrard .............................................................................................................. 13

A Topography of Death: the buildings of the emperor Maxentius on the Via Appia, Rome by Lorraine Kerr ................................................................................................. 24

Consumer Theory and Roman North Africa: a post-colonial approach to the ancient economy by Garrick Fincham ...................................................................................... 34

Wolves’ Nipples and Otters’ Noses? Rural Foodways in Roman Britain by Gillian Hawkes ......................................................................................................................... 45

Material Culture Patterns and Cultural Change in South-West Britain by Jason Lucas ................................................................................................................................. 51

Acculturation and the Temporal Features of Ritual Action by Jan Weekes ............................................................................................................................. 73

Celts, Romans and the Coligny Calendar by Cathy Swift ................................................................ 83

Regarding the Stars by Carol Van Driel-Murray ........................................................................ 96

Measuring Time and Inventing Histories in the Early Empire: Roman and Germanic Perspectives by Maureen Carroll ............................................................................. 104

The Metamorphic Movement: mythological and heroic narratives on Roman sarcophagi by Inge Lyse Hansen .................................................................................. 113
Preface

TRAC and the TRAC proceedings volumes are now a well-established part of research activities in Roman archaeology. There have over the years been many discussions about the future and direction of TRAC, and varying opinions about what is wrong with it, what is right about it, where we should be heading, and if we should all be heading in the same direction. In all this a pessimistic streak has been evident; but the fact that TRAC is sufficiently well-established to have the luxury of being able to engage in such arguments is testament to its healthy state.

At the organising meeting in Glasgow, however, a number of issues were raised which resulted in a new departure for TRAC – the formation of a standing committee of six members, drawn from past and future conference organisers plus representatives from museum and field unit archaeology. This committee will oversee general continuity between one conference and the next, elect a representative to the Roman Archaeology Committee, and act as a back-up to the specific organisers in various years where necessary.

The aims of the committee are to: 1) ensure the continuity of TRAC; 2) represent the interests of TRAC with regard to RAC; 3) promote TRAC within the wider archaeological community and ensure the participation within TRAC of all interested parties, not just those based in universities; 4) ensure that papers from the conference are then published.

It has been the task of this committee to organise the publication of this volume, exceptionally, since there was not a body of postgraduate students at Glasgow able to take it on. As ever, the eleven papers published in this volume are a selection of those given at the conference. Although lacking a common theme, they are representative of the broad range of Roman archaeology today, and share a commitment to a theoretically informed approach to the subject.

We would like to thank all the speakers who gave papers at TRAC 2001 and all those who attended the conference. Thanks go to the organisers and the discussants for the sessions, including Gillian Hawkes, Garrick Fincham, Richard Hingley and Ray Laurence. We would also like to thank the organisers of TRAC and RAC at Glasgow, the usual cohorts of volunteers who ensured its smooth running, the Glasgow Department of Archaeology and the University of Glasgow itself, as well as the Society for the Promotion of Roman Studies for their continued support. TRAC was sponsored by the Roman Research Trust.

The production of this volume has only been made possible due to co-operation of the individual authors in meeting almost impossibly tight deadlines without complaint. We are grateful to the referees for their understanding and promptness in reading and returning papers. We would also like to thank David Brown for his continued support, and Val Lamb at Oxbow Books for setting the book.

Martin Carruthers, Carol van Driel Murray, Andrew Gardner, Jason Lucas, Louise Revell, Ellen Swift